CAPITALS & BASES

The volute scrolls of the Ionic, Erechtheum, Scamozzi, and Empire imitate the helix cross-section of the Nautilus shell. The Acanthus leaves on the temple of Winds and Corinthian Capitals echo the flowering crown of a tree. These capitals are crafted from a number of materials including wood, plaster, and fibers, and are shaped into the appropriate proportions for the various styles of architecture and sizes of column shafts.

- 1 Empire
- 2 Greek Angular Ionic
- 3 Roman Ionic
- 4 Temple Of Winds
- 5 Roman Doric Ornamental
- 6 Roman Corinthian
- 7 Scamozzi
- 8 Greek Erechtheum
